

Growing up it is very important to be apart of a child learning experience, and not be too busy. Being to busy could cause negative affects in their literacy life.

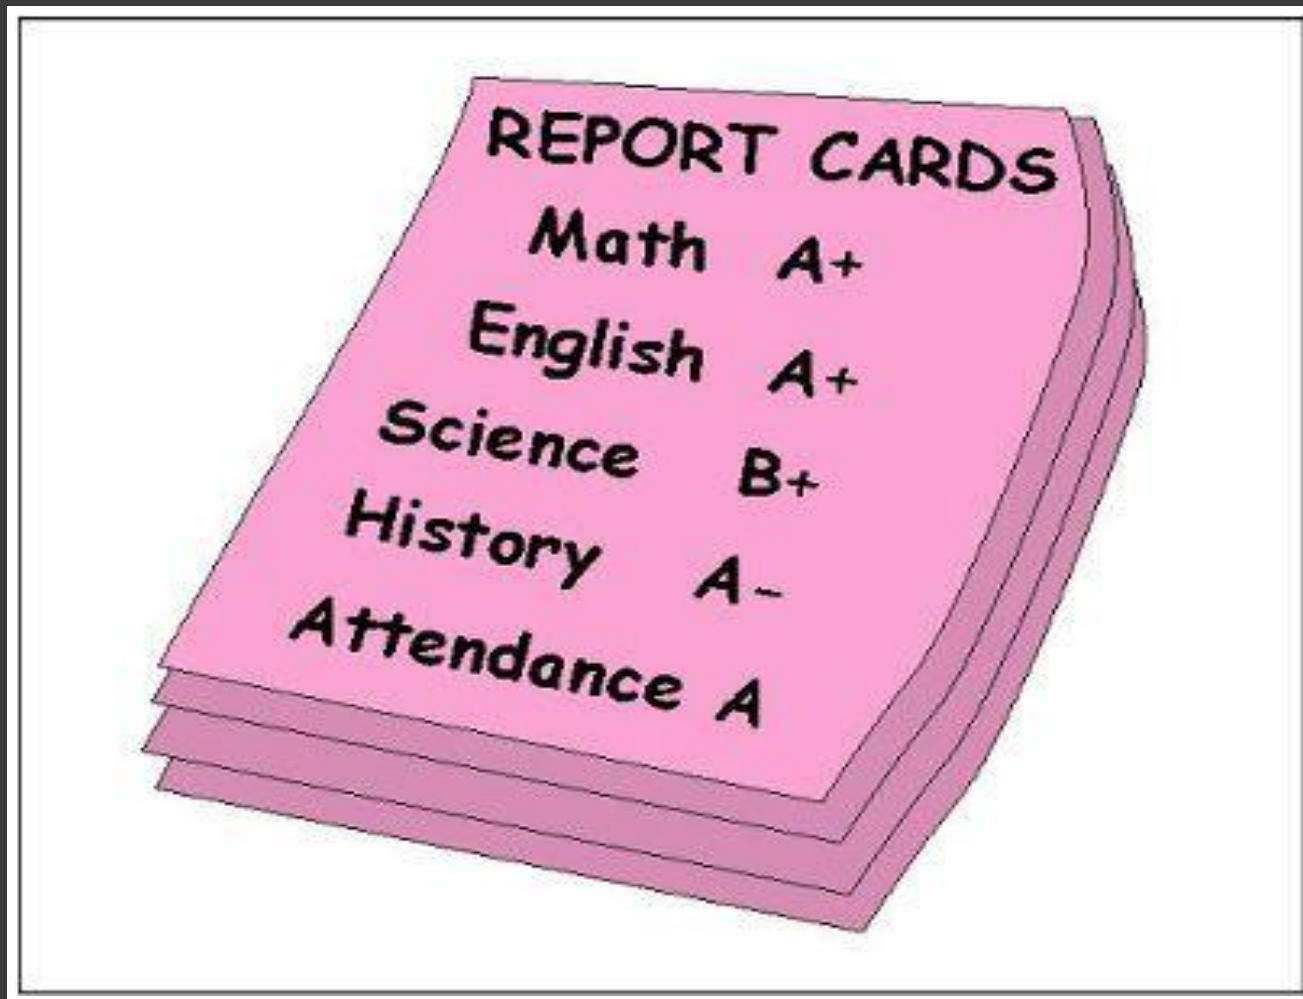

Being involved and helping a child in their literacy life could really impact them later in the future.

There are many proven facts that teaches parents on how doing activities such as spelling, reading to your child, and helping them with pronunciation can improve their literacy skills.

Statistics show parents who are more active within their child literacy life and does these activities helps their grades.

So parents when you watch your child walk across that stage give yourself a pat on the back for being such an impact literacy sponsor.